

Lecturer/Senior Lecturer in Anthropology

One of the oldest and most distinguished Anthropology departments on the African continent seeks to appoint a lecturer/senior lecturer from 1 January 2010. The successful applicant will be energetic and creative in research and passionate about teaching socio-cultural anthropology in an urban South African context to a diverse, international group of undergraduates and postgraduates. Research interests should include, but are not limited, to the following: economic and development anthropology, political anthropology, health, gender, diasporic, transnational and postcolonial studies and the anthropology of cyberspace. Research in the department concentrates on Southern Africa, but candidates working in other geographical areas are welcome to apply (e.g. East Africa, West Africa, Indian Ocean, South Asia, Middle East, and North Africa).

Qualifications:

Senior lecturer: PhD, research and teaching experience, particularly supervision at postgraduate level is required. Publications and demonstrated potential to outstanding scholarship is strongly recommended.

Lecturer: PhD and appropriate teaching and research experience.
